September 22, 2014

Doctors Losing Out Under Obamacare

In a new survey of physicians, 46 percent give Obamacare a “D” or an “F.” One doctor, writing in The Wall Street Journal, says he’s worried about the practice of medicine under Obamacare. Essentially it’s become a cash cow for managed care, hospitals and electronic medical record companies. Physician income is deteriorating as everyone else takes a chunk of it through Obamacare regulations and mandates.

For example, Dr. Sklar writes that under the federal government’s “meaningful use” rules which mandate electronic medical records, he now spends 90 minutes each day entering mostly meaningless data rather than keeping updated with the latest medical literature or calling his patients.

“46 percent of doctors give Obamacare a ‘D’ or ‘F.’” Philip Klein, Washington Examiner, September 17, 2014.