Insurance Better Before Obamacare

Obamacare coverage is worse coverage. A new study by the National Center for Public Policy Research shows health insurance was better before Obamacare. It shows 27-year old singles and 57-year old couples had more plans with better cost-sharing and larger provider networks prior to the Obamacare exchanges.

President Obama said plans people had in the individual market before Obamacare were ‘substandard’ or “crappy,” but the study finds otherwise. The study’s author says, “Almost no one would consider it an improvement in quality to pay a higher premium” or to be stuck in networks with greater restrictions on access to doctors and hospitals.
