“Protect Baby DNA”

Citizens' Council on Health Care

WITHOUT CONSENT: At birth, hospitals prick the heels of infants and send the blood (DNA) to State health departments for genetic testing. The blood and test results become State government property. Many States are building genetic registries (test results) and keeping baby DNA indefinitely. For example, the DNA of more than 915,262 children in MN, 720,000 children in FL, and 2.1 million children in TX has been stored in State government DNA warehouses without consent. Many State health departments are also sharing baby DNA without consent. In Minnesota, 62,576 children have become subjects of genetic research. Lawsuits have been filed in Minnesota and Texas. Baby DNA from Texas and New York has also been sent to the U.S. Military to create an anti-terrorism DNA database.

PARENT RIGHTS: Some States let parents opt out of DNA warehousing before and after testing, even years later (MN/TX/SC). Ask legislators to recognize parent consent rights and newborn civil rights, including genetic privacy and DNA property rights.
