March 23, 2011

Health Care Tsunami

Welcome to the Health Freedom Minute. This is Twila Brase, president of Citizens’ Council for Health Freedom.

The New York Times discussed treatment of the elderly in Japan’s tsunami. Reading about how people ran from the 30-foot wave got me thinking about health care today.

Some younger citizens brought Japan’s elderly to higher ground. Others ran right over seniors on their way up the stairs to safety. Yet others formed a human chain to bring the old to the second floor. Those still on the ground level disappeared when the wave hit.

Many of Japan’s elderly lived in coastal towns. Most of the elderly were too old to outrun the tsunami. On this the first anniversary of Obamacare, I think about Obamacare and the tectonic forces moving to nationalize health care. And I wonder if America’s elderly will be too old to outrun the tsunami of rationing that’s on its way.

Listen again at healthfreedomminute.net.