HIPAA: What to Do Now

Welcome to the Health Freedom Minute. This is Twila Brase president of Citizens’ Council on Health Care.

Over the last four segments, you’ve learned that the HIPAA privacy rule does not protect privacy. It actually took it away.

What to do now.

First, the Minnesota legislature should put patient ownership and written consent requirements into state law. The state law must then be followed.

Second, doctors could drop Medicare participation and no longer face penalties for failure to use electronic medical records, report your data, or follow government treatment protocols.

Third, you do not have to sign the HIPPA form. Refusing to sign will not stop the surveillance, but it will make a statement, educate the clinic, and expose the fact that the HIPAA privacy rule is a lie, a myth, and an unconstitutional law.
