How Obama Plans to Ration Care

The federal government has now given $24.8 billion dollars of taxpayer money to doctors and hospitals in incentive payments for electronic health records. Obama’s 2009 Recovery Act, enacted by the Democrat-controlled Congress, mandates that all doctors, hospitals and other clinicians computerize patient data. This mandate is foundational to imposing Obamacare controls over a physician’s treatment decisions.

If doctors don’t have a government-approved computerized patient record system by January 1st, the Obama administration will reduce every Medicare payment they receive. Government-approved electronic health records must allow patient data to be shared nationwide and with state and federal government agencies. Tell Congress what you think.
