Covid Booster Leads to Cancer, Says Oncologist

A Japanese study suggests micro-clotting from the spike protein is the cause of rising cancer deaths.

A major cause of death in all cancer patients is thrombosis, or blood clots. Since Covid is a clotting disease, and because the Covid shot forces the body to create spike protein, which causes clotting, it's possible that this has led to relapsed and aggressive cancers.

Immunologist and oncologist Dr. Angus Dalgleish said nearly two dozen of his stable melanoma patients relapsed within six to eight weeks of getting the booster. On average his patients had been stable for five to seven years. In addition, eight friends and family members got leukemia/lymphoma after the booster. He says the spike-producing Covid shot should be banned.
