Moderna Cashing in on Long Covid Catastrophe?

About 17 million adults, or 7 percent of American adults, have long COVID – about the same number of people who had cancer in 2020. Thirty percent of people who had Covid now have long COVID. The most prevalent symptoms are persistent fatigue, post exertional malaise, and brain fog.

A key cause of long COVID was inappropriate care. Early treatment with ivermectin would have prevented long COVID, but the government was trying to keep ivermectin out of patient's hands.

Moderna, a Covid shot manufacturer, may now want to cash in on the Long COVID catastrophe. They have no cure yet but say long Covid presents an opportunity to repeat their "leadership and expertise." With everything we know about the shot today, was that expertise?
