GLOBAL Network of Patient Data Launched by Mayo

The Mayo Clinic in Rochester Minnesota and a health care system in Missouri are digging through decades of each other's patient data.

The two organizations founded the Mayo Clinic Platform_Connect, a "global network of connected data" that allows the two organizations to access and analyze each other's data. This is a GLOBAL network of connected data. Three other founding organizations are in Brazil, Israel, and Canada. And now systems in Seoul, South Korea, Singapore, and UC Davis in California have joined the platform, sharing their patient data with each other around the world.

This is your data. They say the data's been de-identified. De-identified does not make it right to share it without your consent. It's your property. States should shut it down.
