Stop Employer Diversion of Your Compensation

Employers who offer health coverage are facing huge hurdles. In a survey, nearly half said they are facing challenges in delivering health coverage and wellness programs.

Last year, only 8 percent of surveyed employers said they planned to re-allocate or rebalance their spending over the next few years. This year, a whopping 63 percent said the same thing. Seventy-three percent plan to switch to new vendors for health and retirement benefits.

To stop the diversion of a third of your compensation to a health plan each year, ask your employer to give you those funds in cash and then join an affordable health sharing organization, such as Samaritan Ministries. Then ask Congress to restore affordable medical indemnity insurance to America.
