HIPAA Makes You Vulnerable

HIPAA digitized and made your medical records available to millions of people to profile, analyze, and control your doctors. By enacting HIPAA, mandating electronic health records, and requiring interoperable systems, your medical privacy is gone. A recent lawsuit says 300,000 records were monetized by a government-approved user of the system.

HIPAA is a security rule, not a privacy rule. They promise to keep your data secure as they transfer it to whomever they want. By digitizing medical records, Congress made every American a target of nefarious actors, profiteers, and blackmailers. State privacy laws that require patient consent can shut down HIPAA.

“TEFCA must address false representations, health systems say,”
