Can Law Force Catholic Priests to Break Seal of Confession?

Democrat bills in Montana and Washington seek to force priests to break the seal of confession in suspected cases of child abuse or neglect. But a priest who breaks the seal today is excommunicated. This won't stop with child abuse. It would be just the beginning. The bill includes jail time for non-compliant priests, ordained ministers, rabbi, imam and others.

Like the church, the doctor's office used to be a sanctuary where confidentiality was protected even for criminals. But today, data from our medical records is broadly shared under government mandates. Find a doctor who will protect your privacy at JointheWedge.com.
