Doctors are in Trouble – So Are You

Medical schools are training doctors to comply, not to think. After residency, typically with at least $200,000 in loans, government and health plans require them to follow computerized protocols or risk financial losses.

Congress's electronic medical record mandate switched their attention from patients to paperwork, driving the mission out of medicine. Congress cuts their pay while giving raises to the health plans that control them. Corporate clinics are switching from physicians to non-physicians, and more doctors than ever are committing suicide.

Doctors are in trouble. This means you are in trouble. Corporations want AI and non-physicians to replace doctors. Unless we get these rapacious third parties out of health care and go back to first-party payment, we are all in trouble.
