Health Freedom for Patients

What would health freedom look like for patients? Health freedom for patients is probably everything you dream medical care and insurance coverage would be if you need it, or for those who've been alive longer, everything you remember it once was.

Health freedom for patients would mean having doctors of your choice. It would mean longer visits, listening ears and a trusted relationship. It would mean affordable treatment and hospitalizations that wouldn't threaten to send you to the poor house. It would mean a system of care, compassion, and charity, where hospitals didn't sue you for payment. Your privacy would be protected, and affordable prices would mean you wouldn't fear the medical bills more than the medical condition you face.

Let's resurrect this affordable system of health freedom for patients.

Presented daily by Twila Brase, President and Co-founder
