Mammograms in an AI Box?

A virtual care company called Everlywell, will begin selling AI analysis of mammograms directly to consumers. After the Clairity Breast test is ordered by a provider from an affiliated medical group, women can upload their mammogram for $249 to get an assessment of their 5-year risk of getting breast cancer.

Their plan is to reach self-pay patients nationwide. The CEO says, "The goal is that if you go through it, it feels like you're purchasing a skincare product or a T-shirt."

So, it's supposed to be easy, but what if you don't like what you hear? What if you believe it and it's not true? Think carefully before you let someone predict your future because the rest of your life may be affected.

"Everlywell Brings Clairity's FDA-Authorized AI Breast Cancer Risk Assessment to Women Nationwide," (Press Release), Businesswire, October 1, 2026:
